NATIONAL NEWS BRIEFS

Vietnam Is Remembered 10 Years Later

April 30 marked the 10th anniversary of the final withdrawal from Vietnam, and the country remembered with a mass of media coverage and memorial services.

The Vietnam War, usually remembered as the only war the United States lost, changed the way Americans viewed themselves and their government. The power of the presidency was questioned, foreign policy and interventionist tendencies were reevaluated, moral and racial attitudes toward lesser developed nations were questioned. Some believe the Vietnam war made America gun shy while others believe the nation still hasn't learned its lesson, citing U.S. involvement in Central America as example.

A Newsweek poll indicates just how hard Americans have reassessed their country's involvement in southeast Asia, especially college graduates aged 30-39 who were among the protestors of the 60s.

When asked whether the U.S. should have cut its losses and withdrew earlier from Vietnam or stepped up the military effort, 49 percent of the national sample said withdraw earlier and 38 percent said step up the effort. Of the college grads, 63 percent said withdraw and 31 percent step up the effort.

When Newsweek traced the trend of what percentage of the population viewed Vietnam "as a mistake," 24 percent in 1965 thought it was compared to 64 percent in 1985. Hindsight is a wonderful thing.

In terms of current military strategy, 75 percent of the national sample said the U.S. should be more cautious as opposed to more active in using military force to defend American interests and combat terrorism. Of the college grads, 90 percent preferred a more cautious approach.

Reagan Bill Delays Sanctions Against South Africa

Reagan Appeals For Support of Budget Cuts

President Reagan made an appeal to the public in his first televised oral office address to support a compromise Senate Republican budget resolution that would cut next year's deficit by an estimated $51 billion.

He emphasized that all economic gains of the past years are at stake in the Senate budget votes.

Reagan warned he would veto any tax increase and said he could not compromise further on defense spending.

He also defended a limit on social security cost-of-living increases. The proposal would set a ceiling of 2% percent increase for coming years. Some officials argue this goes against Reagan's promise to not cut social security budget.

The compromise package would terminate or phase out 20 government programs, including Amtrak subsidies. Major cuts in 40 other programs, including student aid, are also planned.

Nicaraguan Aid Plan Defeated By Congress

President Reagan lost an important foreign policy battle with Congress last week when the House voted 303-123 to kill his $14 million "humanitarian" aid package to contra rebels in Nicaragua.

This occurred after a series of revisions to the bill that were approved by one legislative branch but rejected by the other. The House first endorsed a Democratic alternative to Reagan's initial aid program that would funnel $14 million in aid to refugees outside Nicaragua not the rebels, and would support future peace negotiations.

Then Republicans drafted a substitute bill that would give the aid to the rebels, but on the condition it was not used for weapons. This proposal was rejected by the House 215-213. Then in the last vote, the House defeated the entire bill. Congress voted last year to cut off contra aid that was being funded through the Central Intelligence Agency.

Republicans feel failure to aid the rebels will allow "allies of the Soviet Union to establish an important foothold [in Central America] and threaten national security." President Reagan said he will continue to present aid proposals to Congress.

Attitude Against Honors Program Unwarranted

As many of you may have known before the article in the Flyer was published, the Honors Program will be setting up an off campus facility for study and recreation next Fall. The Flyer did not publish information about the house until now because the administration requested we hold off on a story.

According to various officials, advance notice about the college's acquisition of its first off campus facility for students could create a furor among Salisbury residents that would threaten completion of the agreement to lease the house.

Considering the problems that have arisen in the past between SSC students and Salisbury residents, the fear is justified. But the community's opinion of the study house is not the only negative reaction the college may face--there is also the student body's opinion.

There are many students still steaming about allowing honors students to live in special interest housing and now this new "special privilege," as some see it, will probably only ruffle more feathers.

True, some of the honor students currently living in honors housing have not maintained the grades needed to stay in the program, and so far the group has not contributed much to campus wide programming as special interest groups are supposed to do. But neither have the other special interest groups living in Chesapeake.

However, the real problem lies not in whether or not honors students get to live together, possibly inconveniencing some other student to find a new room, but rather in an attitude that the school is catering to "smart" kids.

Well, in case you haven't realized it, college is supposed to be a place of learning, a place to broaden one's mind. A prejudice against students who want to get a little something extra out of their college education by participating in honors programs and in new methods of learning shows a narrow minded view.

There is a prevalent attitude on campus that students of above average intelligence are either snobs or people who don't know how to enjoy life. This elitist attitude doesn't begin in college, of course, it is pervasive through grade school and high school, too, but one would think young adults in college would have matured a bit since graduating from high school enough to know the belief usually doesn't hold water. True, there are bookish types who will never seem to quite fit in, but bright people are also more apt to try new things, so they're are usually not boring. (Just in case you were wondering, no this reporter is not an honors student.)

Letters To The Editor

Dry Campus: is it the Real Answer?

Dear Editor:

Lately I have heard talk of the SSC campus becoming dry. This means alcoholic beverages would not be allowed anywhere on campus.

SSC students should be aware that the administration is very concerned with this issue. A "dry campus" probably sounds good to the administration. They simply eliminate a problem by not dealing with it right?

Wrong. A dry campus is not the answer. Some say it will cause more problems in the off campus community. Even if it doesn't, there are other problems with a dry campus.

What happens to business at the Gull's Nest on Friday night with no beer? The dry campus policy would drive students of legal drinking age to off campus bars.

The worst problem of all is the arbitrary infringement upon the rights of residents who are of age. These citizens have waited 21 years to have the right to use alcohol.

Once in college, they are told they cannot drink on campus.

A policy of no alcohol on campus is absurd and unthinkable. Stupidity must not be disguised as conservatism.

A proposal that makes more sense would be to designate certain dormitories as "dry." Wicomico, Pocomoke, Nanticoke and Manokin are basically freshmen and sophomore dorms. Since today's freshmen and sophomores are not usually of age, these dorms should have very little alcohol.

However, past experience shows that alcohol abuse most often occurs in these dorms. Maybe we should eliminate alcohol in these dorms while using the old policy for the rest of the campus who are of age should be given the opportunity to live elsewhere.

Alcohol does cause problems on campus. But, the administration must be more considerate of all the students. A dry campus is not the panacea it appears to be. All the issues must be considered when making policy decisions.

If you, the student, want to sit back and let the administration inflict unfair policies on you, you get what you deserve. If you feel strongly that a dry campus policy is ludicrous then do something about it.

A Response to Creationist's Letter

Dear Editor:

I am writing in response to the Christian who, in the last issue of the Flyer, was very displeased with Darwin and the theory of evolution. He was obviously a pro-Creationist who felt strongly about his views.

I have heard violent disputes on both sides, complete with strong language and hot tempers. How can these men of Christianity and "intelligence" be so close minded and rant on so.

I ask myself why there even has to be a dispute. I believe in evolution, but I also believe in creationism. How do I connect the two? I believe somebody had to start the evolutionary process, and that someone had to be God. He is not some fantastic magician who simply said "abracadabra" and spawned the earth. He used his power and mind to think out the world then created it.

Gary Rinaman

He started life by washing water upon the land. (Notice that both sides of the argument agree we came from the sea.) And, we can see evolution in everyday life--take the dairy cow for instance. It didn't always have those huge udders; they evolved through breeding and use.

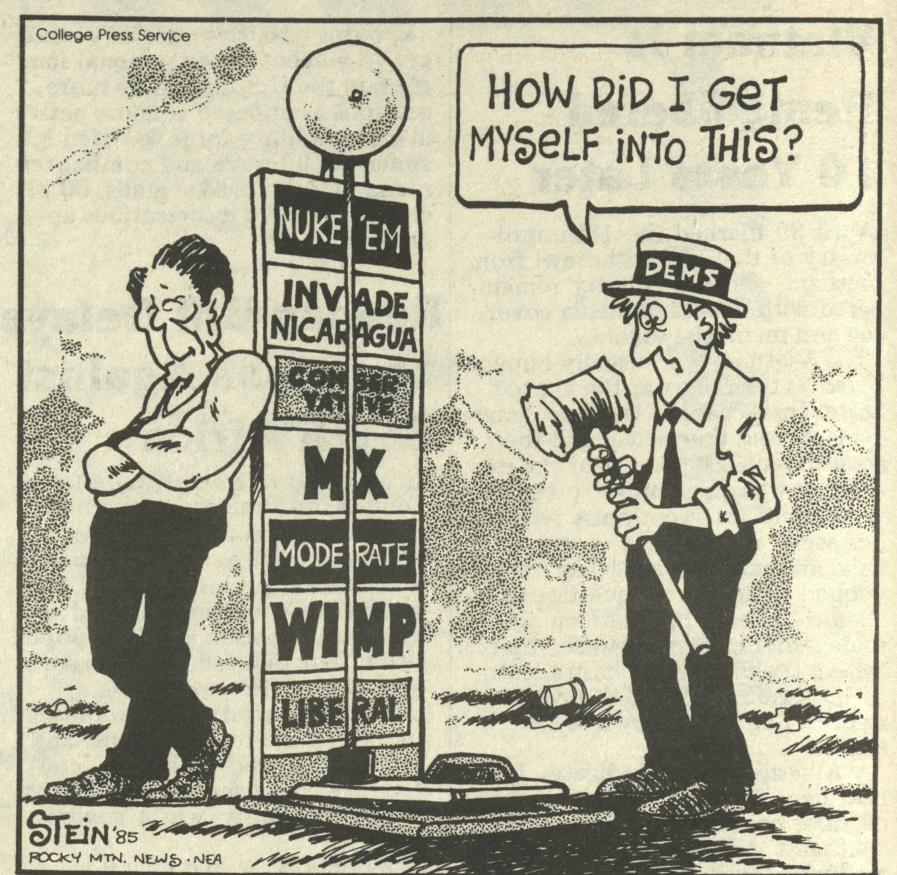

To the scientists, I say read the bible for a better understanding of evolution, and also of nutrition and medicine.

So why must we fight? There is not need to wipe out the theories of the opposing view. We must join together with open minds and open hearts to achieve a better understanding of life.

Disabled Facilities To Be Considered For Modulars

BY TED PALIK

Facilities for the disabled are being considered for the modular housing project by the SSC administration, thanks in large part to Robert Watson of the Disabled Student Union.

Watson exerted pressure after Administrative Services Director Richard Yobst told him that there would be no accommodations available for the disabled in the homes because it wouldn't be cost efficient. After discussions with Director of Residence Life Barry King and Assistant Dean of Students John Fields, Watson was told that ramps for the disabled would be "considered" for the modular housing project.

Watson said that he took it upon himself to fight for ramps for the modular homes. "I thought it was wrong that they weren't going to make any accommodations. We're talking about human beings here," he said in answer to the cost efficiency argument.

In his fight, Watson emphasized "humanitarian and legal arguments and tactics" for getting disabled accommodations for the modular homes, but did not stress discrimination as a motive for non-provision of disabled facilities. Finally, Watson was told to lay off his tactics of "making people sweat" over the issue and the administration told him it would consider facilities for the project.

Since the builder of the Nanticoke homes is a private company, SSC would probably have to fund the disabled facilities itself and/or obtain state or private aid if they decided to go ahead and provide ramps for the disabled.

Watson hoped that his clamoring for disabled facilities for the project would not be interpreted as "saying that SSC does not provide for the disabled on the campus." But he added that the modulars should have the proper facilities even though there may not be any disabled students living in them for the first semester they are in use. "The homes should be there for the willing; for anyone who wants to use them," he said.

because "the disabled population is growing on campus."

The Disabled Student Union continues to act as a positive role model for young students in the community, Watson stressed, and next semester he hopes there can be an even stronger relationship between the community and the campus.

Program Board Staff Selected For 1985 - 86

The student program staff of the Salisbury State Program Board for the 1985-86 academic year has been selected, David Gano, director of the College Center, announced last week. These student programmers will be responsible for the development of campus activities programming formats and event production in five major categories: film video, coffeehouse programs, contemporary entertainment, special events, concert/snack bar shows.

In addition to production and selection responsibilities, the SSPB members will represent SSC at the National Association for Campus Activities Regional Conference in Liberty, New York later this year.

Blaise Miller, a senior business administration major, returns for his second year with the SSPB as the Concert/Snack Bar programmer. Miller was responsible for the highly successful Ravyns/Shor Patrol concert this past March. He also developed a new program called The Comedy Connection, a series of events showcasing up and coming comedians. In addition to responsibilities for Concert/Snack Bar programs, Miller will serve as the SSPB's staff coordinator.

Martha Bingham, who is presently in charge of the Spring Formal Dance, will expand her duties in the Fall as the Special Events programmer to encompass other major campus events including the opening activities program, Parents/Spouses Day and the Student Homecoming Dance. A transfer student new to SSC this year, Bingham is a business administration major with an economics concentration.

New to the SSPB is sophomore Beth Patterson, an English education major. A member of the Honor's Program, Beth currently serves as the Financial Manager to The Flyer. She is also an integral part of the newly-formed Peer Health Education Program.

Patterson hopes to "introduce interesting entertainment for the student body, as well as some horizon-broadening entertainment" via her new position.

Suzanne Savet, a second newcomer to the SSPB, will chair Contemporary Entertainment programs for the campus.

A popular student activities area, contemporary entertainment events in the past have included magicians Denny & Lee, Simon Sez, juggler Edward Jackson and mentalist Gil Eagles. A business administration major and a current resident of Choptank Hall, Savet hopes to make an entertaining but meaningful contribution to SSC students through her programs.

The Coffeehouse programmer position has yet to be selected. Any students interested in chairing this series of programs should contact the College Center Office, Room 104 as soon as possible. The position carries a stipend of approximately $600 per semester. Prior experience in student activities or student leadership is preferred.

SSC Student Directs Sophanes Play

BY MARY ELLEN LARSON

It all began when she was invited by the communications department to do an honors project. That's when Jo Ellen Harrison, a blond, petite senior in communications, decided to take on the task of directing the currently-running show, The Servant of Two Masters. Sophanes, the student theatre group, needed someone to direct their next production, and, says Jo Ellen, "I thought I could use it as my project."

She submitted a proposal, and after convincing Department Chair Lou Ann Daly of the project's learning value, her job was underway.

Jo Ellen chose to do Servant partly because of her familiarity with the play. In a previous directing class, she had done a scene from the play and thought of people who would fit the various parts. Also, she adds, "it is a funny show."

Servant is an Italian Renaissance comedy. Its characteristic slapstick humor is the basis for many of the sitcoms on television today. "They used more slapstick than we do in this show because they were artistic professionals," Jo Ellen explains. "They were acrobats and mimes in addition to being actors."

Jo Ellen, who has been involved in a number of SSC productions ("Snoopy" was my favorite!), says she prefers to do a comedy rather than a serious drama. "I'm not a serious person," she giggles.

She laughs easily and frequently as she busily paints a trunk to be used as a prop. She flashes a bright, genuine smile to everyone who says hello as they walk by her on the half-constructed set.

But, her apparent carefree attitude is just a friendly cover for the seriousness of this work.

"I spend every spare minute I have on this show," she notes. With a regular class workload to concern herself with, that kind of schedule can be taxing. "I have nightmares about this show. About people still not knowing their lines. About people in the audience getting up and leaving. I can't seem to concentrate on anything else." The director is, in fact, ultimately responsible for everything. Despite advice from the set and lighting designers, even technical decisions belong to the director. Jo Ellen says she has learned a great deal about the technical aspect of a production.

And, directing involves much more than telling the actors where to position themselves.

"Blocking is minimal part of directing. A lot of it is being an acting coach." Jo Ellen says she has made an effort to cast inexperienced actors and comments on the challenge it is to bring out an actor's ability.

Her own stage presence has been tested by experience in stage productions since the age of four.

She began in church and continued in elementary school plays.

In middle school, she sang with a pop band, a stint that lasted until the 11th grade. Not only was that fun, she says, but it was an invaluable learning experience. "I got used to being in front of people. And, we had to learn how to be responsible. We had to make our own bookings."

Jo Ellen Harrison: "I spend every spare minute I have on this show."

Apparel remembered Jo Ellen's portrayal of "Sally" in Snoopy, in which she exaggerated her already soft, high-pitched voice. The effect landed her in a spot for Hess as a cabbage patch doll.

She has also been a cheerleader for a Price Buick-Pontiac ad on Channel 47. After that, she was on 47's talent file and was called back to do a commercial for another car dealer and one for an insurance company.

She admits it's all a bit intimidating, but states, "It's a lot of fun."

Jo Ellen recently auditioned for Cabaret, which is scheduled to open in late summer in Ocean City, and is still waiting to hear if she got the part.

"But if I don't do that this summer," she says, "I'll probably be working at my Grandma's parking lot in Ocean City." Her grandmother owns a large lot by the Majestic Hotel.

Born and raised in Ocean City, Jo Ellen is an Eastern Shore native who plans on staying that way. Once she lived in Virginia to attend school but, in a voice surprisingly free of any regional accent, says, "I couldn't stand to be away."

She has evidently done just fine right here in Maryland, as her honors invitation indicates. This project has indeed proved to be worthwhile. In addition to learning to budget precious time, manage people and understand theatre's technical as well as artistic side, Jo Ellen has come face to face with one of life's cold realities.

"I've learned that if you want anything done, you have to do it yourself."

Honors Program Gets Off Campus House

BY TERRI TRESP

Renovations on the Honors House should be completed by the end of the semester.

In a first for SSC, the College has obtained an off campus property at 303 College Ave. for the Honors program to use a study house.

Raymond Whall, English professor and honors program director, said the house will "provide honors students with a center, a location they can identify with," something honors housing in Chesapeake and Chester hasn't accomplished.

"a sense of esprit will form to make the program a more thorough influence. Right now students are simply taking honors classes."

Whall said the housing program was supposed to provide a "sense of collegiality." It succeeded for some of the people in the program, but didn't spread to others living

With Spring here and warm weather approaching, most of us are thinking about physically shaping up and possibly losing a few pounds. A few simple tips that may help accomplish this are:

Food Intake (eating the basic four foods): 1. Milk Group-2 servings, use skim or low fat milk; 2. Meat Group-2 servings, use lean meat and cook by broiling, baking or roasting; 3. Fruit and Vegetable Group-4 servings, raw vegetables are lower in calories and more filling. Use fresh fruit if possible and syrup should be drained from canned fruit; 4. Grain Group-4 servings, choose only one starchy food per meal and use thin sliced breads as they have less calories.

Don't start a diet: 1. While you're on a trip or vacation; 2. When you quit smoking or abstain from alcohol; 3. When your period is due; 4. When you're pregnant; 5. Before or during exams; 6. When a big decision is in the offing; 7. When you're sick; 8. When you've just been fired or ended a love affair; 9. When you've got to lose pounds in a week.

The College is now working out a plan to lease the house from the Foundation to help the organization pay off the property.

Gilbert said there are still some zoning considerations to be worked out—for example, the College has to provide four parking spaces for the house which aren't there now—but said renovations should be completed by the end of the semester, which it purchased for investment.

Future Brighter For Grads

Hiring Increases Projected In Most Majors

BY JUDITH O'FLYNN KAYSER
AND VIRGINIA P. RUTHS

The class of '85 is heading into an improved job market.

Although the economy is still feeling the effects of 1984's second half slowdown, the nation isn't likely to tip into a recession any time soon. In fact, most forecasters expect the economy to pick up momentum throughout the year.

A projected upswing in hiring accompanies this improvement, according to the College Placement Council's recruiting activity survey conducted last October. Of the 399 respondents, 65% expect improvement in the first half of 1985 from the second half of last year.

Survey respondents anticipate an 8% hiring increase overall, although projections vary widely by disciplines. Nevertheless, increased hiring sparks greater competition among employers to attract top students, especially in fields such as electrical and mechanical engineering and computer science.

"This year, 80% of those hired by our company will have engineering degrees. In particular demand will be electrical, computer, systems and aerospace engineers," says Robert Gammill, chief of college relations at Martin Marietta Aerospace in Denver, which expects to hire 700 to 770 new college graduates in 1985.

It also could be a good year for top accounting students. "To meet the needs of our expanding practice, our hiring of new accounting graduates will be up more than 12% over 1984," says James C. Older, national coordinator of recruitment and college relations at Deloitte Haskins & Sells in New York.

Technical graduates will be on the top of the job market this year, the survey shows. Employers expect a 7% increase in engineering hires, as well as an 11% gain in the science, math and other technical categories. "Hiring in 1985 is going to be up slightly from 1984, with an even heavier emphasis on technical graduates," says Chester A. Francke, director of placement and college relations at General Motors Corp. in Detroit. He projects that "75% to 80% of new college hires [at GM] this year will be technical graduates."

In the business-related disciplines, employers expect to hire 4% more graduates than last year. At colleges and universities, placement personnel already are beginning to notice the increased interest in these graduates. "Demand is strong for business disciplines. Opportunities are increasing in accounting and finance, and marketing and sales have also improved," says J.W. Paquette, director of commerce placement at the University of Illinois College of Commerce & Business Administration in Urbana, Ill.

A 1% decline was reported in the other nontechnical category (which includes liberal arts, humanities and social sciences majors), but these graduates often find jobs with small employers not represented in the CPC survey.

With the recent small business growth prompted by the economic expansion, employment opportunities for generalists appear to be expanding. "The overall recruiting situation has improved since last year. And we are getting more inquiries from employers that are not of the Fortune 500 variety - that is, employers that are not very large," says Elenora A. Cawthon, dean of student services and director of placement at Louisiana Tech University in Ruston, La.

Victoria Ball, director of career planning services at Brown University in New York.

Technical graduates will be on the top of the job market this year, the survey shows. Employers expect a 7% increase in engineering hires, as well as an 11% gain in the sciency in Providence, R.I., is seeing the same thing. "We're getting more of a variety of organizations [recruiting on campus]. We work hard at developing opportunities for liberal arts graduates and are having some success," she says.

By specific type of employer, the CPC survey categories showed increases in employment opportunities across the board with just two notable exceptions. First, banking, finance, and insurance reported a 5% decline in hiring from last year.

This drop may reflect the industry's uncertainty over the effects of deregulation. Second, electrical machinery and equipment reported a 9% decline.

The good news is that the chemical industry is slowly beginning to recover from the effects of the recession. However, its projected hiring increase of 23% must be viewed in light of the unusually low hiring level last year.

College recruiting will be strong in the merchandising and services areas, with employers anticipating a 16% hiring increase. This trend reflects strong consumer spending as well as expansion among many retail companies.

In the petroleum category, several large companies are significantly increasing their hiring, although as with the chemical industry, any increase is exaggerated compared with the depressed situation last year.

Survey respondents also expect to increase the number of interviews. The anticipated 6% gain over last year indicates that some employers are making a comeback from the constraints of the recession. Further, employers expect a 3% increase in the number of campuses scheduled for recruiting visits. "During the recent downturn within the industry, we continued to have a presence on campus. However, this year, we are increasing slightly the number of schools we will be visiting," says Mr. Francke of General Motors.

Reports from colleges and universities support employers' projections of increased recruiting activity.

"Fall recruiting was 12% to 15% ahead of last year, and we are projecting that spring recruiting will maintain that lead," says Mr. Paquette of the University of Illinois.

Charles W. Sundberg, director of placement and career planning at the University of California at Los Angeles agrees that things are looking up. "In every regard, recruiting this year is better than it was the last couple of years," he says.

This may not be the best of times, but the economy has enough bright signs to make most people including graduating college seniors feel good about this year's prospects.

While hiring will probably not rebound to prerecession levels, the class of 1985 can look forward to better opportunities.

Upcoming Dance Company Concert To Portray Joys of Spring

The SSC Dance Company is preparing for their annual spring concert to be presented May 11, 12 and 13 in the Holloway Hall Auditorium.

The theme this year, Reverie of Lights, indicates that the performance promises to be light and full of fantasy-like qualities. Three of the works in the concert are commissioned works created especially for the company by guest artists.

Quiet City was choreographed for the Dance Company by Trina Collins, artistic director and choreographer for the nationally acclaimed company, Danceteller. Quiet City, with music of the same name by Aaron Copeland, incorporates the joys of spring.

Shirly Waxman, Israeli folk dance specialist, has choreographed a suite of exciting and joyous Israeli dances for the company.

The third commissioned work was created by one of SSC's alumni, Beth Lauridsen, of Ocean City. She has created a clogging piece full of fast footwork and a lot of hoops and hollers.

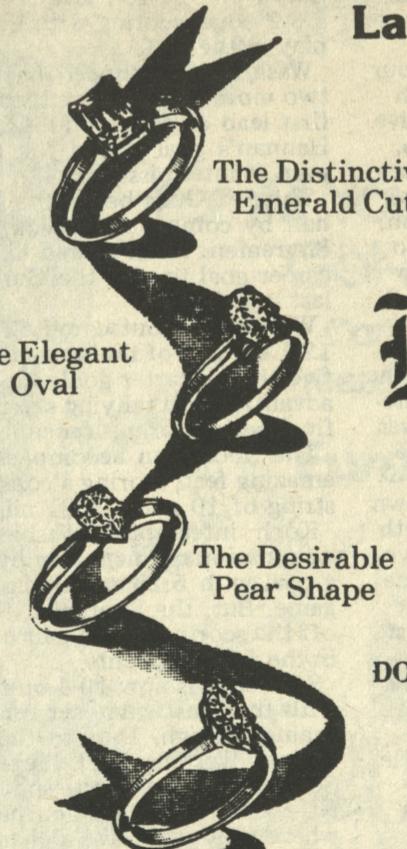

The concert also includes works choreographed by the company's director and instructor Kathryn Martin with original music composed by local musician and musical director Ed Cantwell. Students John Andrews, Michael Danner and Darrol Lee also have choreographed works for the company.

The May 11 and 13 performances will begin at 8 p.m. and the May 12 performance will be a 2 p.m. matinee. Tickets are $4 general admission and $3 for senior citizens. Tickets are available at the College Center or at the door.

The students who will be performing are: Cheryl Allen, Genevieve Bellavance, Deborah Bowen, Melanie Burroughs, Michael Danner, Suzette Gaston, Beth Gilbert, Mandy Godwin, Kimberly Green, Julie Kilmon, Darrol Lee, Laurie Lindsey, Agata Liszkowska, Melela Lovellette, Margaret McConnell, Elaine Medlin, Missi Ruffo, Stacy Snyder, Dan Zollinofer, John Andrews, Mary Beth Audet and Jackie Cole.

Women's Rugby Arrives At SSC

BY RICK GILMAN

For the first time in SSC history a Women's Rugby club is taking the field and competing on an inter-collegiate level.

The club has been able to schedule only three matches this year, losing to Dickinson College 12-0 in their only game thus far. But the team hopes to expand its program in the future.

The formation of the club was the idea of President Andrea Shreve with the help of Darien Ripple.

"I've been going here for four semesters now, and since there wasn't a women's rugby club, I've always had the idea of starting one."

Shreve, under the tutelage of the already established Men's Rugby Club, began putting that idea into action last November. The team now operates independently of the men's squad and has raised its membership to 20, some of whom are inactive.

Despite their opening defeat to Dickinson College, optimism runs high.

"Because we're a newly formed club, Dickinson expected to walk all over us," said Manager Kathy Tafts, "but they only scored three times."

"People from Dickinson said that we played well for our size and that when we have a full squad to compete against ourselves during practice we'll have a strong club."

The club has two dates remaining this spring. They play UMBC May 4 at 11:30 a.m. in the Dust Bowl (located behind Sea Gull stadium), and at the Preakness Tournament in Baltimore May 11-12.

The Men's Club will also be competing at those events.

According to Shreve, all but herself and one other player knew little about the game of rugby. But interest in the club was high and most of the players are expected to return next fall.

"We've got a good, dedicated, hard-core group," said Shreve.

Next year the Women's Rugby Club expects an even greater interest from students and, according to Shreve, hopes to schedule "at least eight matches in the fall and eight matches plus a tournament in the spring."

The club is part of the Intramurals Department and like other campus clubs, receives money ($82 a semester) from the school. But Shreve said no money was given to the club this semester and that each member has already paid $45 each in dues for jerseys, balls and transportation.

"Even with the money from the school," Shreve said, "we'll always have to pay dues."

While some people may be surprised to see women playing rugby, Shreve said that "women rugby clubs exist all up and down the east coast." She added, "People look at rugby players as a bunch of rowdy, hard-drinking people, but we just go out to have a good time."

Talts added that "some people think that it's unusual when I tell them I play rugby, but others say it's a great idea and offer their support."

But Talts does admit to some stereotypes. "The team is pretty rough," she said, "but we're still ladies."

Dr. Laura Murray serves as the team's faculty advisor. She played four years of rugby at the College of William and Mary. Other executive officers include Vicki Kjellberg, vice president; Valorie Hunt, treasurer; and Lori Kolicki, secretary.

For anyone interested in playing, the club holds practices Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays at 3:30 and every weekday the week before a game at the field next to Tawes Gym. According to Talts, "we're always looking for new, interested people."

Laxers Fall to Top Ranked Shoremen

BY OWEN FITZGERALD

The SSC lacrosse team was in prime condition and eagerly awaiting their annual showdown last Sunday with local rival, Washington College.

The Sea Gulls had just won four games in a row prior to the Washington College game with decisive victories over Mt. Saint Mary's, 10-3; Kutztown, 24-4; Lynchburg, 18-10 and St. Mary's 10-3, to give them a 10-3 record for the season.

Washington College came into Sunday's game ranked no. 1 in Division III, with a record of 10-2. The stage was set for what many expected to be an action packed match that would be decided in the final seconds of play. Unfortunately for Salisbury fans, the game was decided at the beginning of the fourth quarter.

The Shoremen from Chestertown upheld their topranked status with a convincing 16-6 victory, decisively out playing the Gulls in the final 20 minutes.

The first half, however, was just what the fans wanted to see. Salisbury sent a message to the Shoremen early in the game that they were not to be intimidated by Washington's bone-crunching style of defense.

The Sea Gulls opened up a 2-0 lead in the first four minutes of play on goals by Roger Koch and Jim Townsend.

The Shoremen quickly tied the game at 2-2, only to have Salisbury's Jim Nelson give the Gulls a 3-2 edge, scoring with 6:13 to play in the half.

Washington bounced back with two more goals to give them their first lead of the day at 4-3. Kyle Hannan's goal pulled the Gull's even at intermission 4-4.

The Sea Gulls began the second half by coming right back at the Shoremen. Koch scored his 100th career goal to give the Gulls their last lead 5-4.

Washington outscored Salisbury 12-1 the rest of the way, piling on five third quarter goals for a 9-5 advantage and tallying seven in the final period for insurance.

The Shoremen accomplished an amazing feat, scoring a consecutive string of 10 goals in 21 minutes.

Koch interrupted Washington's domination momentarily by scoring a goal with 5:28 remaining in the game. But, the Shoremen finished off the scoring with a pair of tallies in the final moments.

Salisbury is now 10-4 on the year with their last game set for today against Lehigh. Despite the loss against Washington College, the Seagulls have a definite shot at the NCAA Division 111 Tournament, where they will have a chance to avenge their loss to the Shoremen.

Craig Shreeves, a sophomore, is 5-3-1, and junior C.R. Murphy is 4-1 overall. Freshman Ricky Collett has returned from a hand injury to earn a win and save.

Also seeing action for the Sea Gulls from the mound are Jeff Stokes, Lanny Fisher, Eric Hahn and Jerry Connolly.

Baseball Team Breaks Records

BY TODD GALLEN

The Sea Gull baseball team recently dropped two games to Johns Hopkins and George Mason, but still have seven games remaining as they continue to break records and aim for the playoffs.

Freshman Randy Collett has set a new record for most walks in a game with five. Collett and junior Gary Flower are both one away from tying the SSC record for most triples in a season. Brian Dunn, a senior, is three home runs away from the season record of 10.

The Sea Gulls were tied 4-4 in the tenth inning against Johns Hopkins with one out when a Blue Jay player hit a three run homer to end the deadlock, 7-4. The contest could not have been closer as both teams had 10 hits and one error a piece until the game winning homer.

The Gulls hoped to average the tough loss with a win over George Mason, a strong Division 1 opponent whom the Gulls had defeated earlier in the week. The team's hopes were dashed, as though, the Patriots jumped out to an early lead and held on for the shutout, 13-0.

Freshman Mike O'Donnell continues to lead the SSC pitching staff with a 9-2 record, only three wins short of the school record for wins.

The Sea Gulls have six games remaining on their 1985 schedule. The Gulls will travel to UMBC, Mt. St. Mary's, Frostburg State twice and Glassboro State before returning home May 8 to face Division 1 for Delaware at 3 p.m. The team will close out the regular season May 11 at UMES.

The Sea Gulls have a good shot at the regional playoffs pending the outcomes of their remaining games.

The team continued in the single elimination tournament by beating Rock City 28-0. In the finals, Salisbury had a tough fight with Gettysburg, but won the game 4-3 to win the Cup.
